BEYOND BUSINESS

Supporting Embassies and Consulates

Obstacles for Embassies and Consulates

Relocating a diplomat, expatriates or any government employee for an assignment can pose unique challenges. Ensuring that accommodation needs are fulfilled does not have to be one of them.

- Safety is one of the main concerns. Since they are targeted professionals, it is important that they stay in safe regions and located near major embassies and diplomatic missions.
- Cultural fit can be a challenge as embassies and consulate's employees might be from anywhere in the world and have different customs.
- Housing partners must have furnished units and provide cleaning services as some of the assignments can be short-term.
- Productivity can be affected by an interruption in daily routine, including fitness and nutrition.
- Housing arrangements should not become an obstacle by being a large administrative task.
- Understanding the sensitivity of private information from the members of the embassy or government is extremely important.
